

BEFORE A DISASTER STRIKES

If your faith community determines that meeting human need in a disaster is part of your mission, you need a specific plan of action. This list of suggestions is basic, brief, concise, and do-able.

- Join a local and/or state-wide VOAD (Volunteer Organizations Active in Disaster)
- Contact the American Red Cross to see if your meeting facility might qualify as a disaster shelter. Take their training appropriate to the services you will provide.
- Request disaster preparedness and response training from your denomination.
- Train your religious leadership to recognize and appreciate the differences between disaster ministry and pastoral ministry. Leaders determine before the disaster the roles they will assume, and, if necessary, seek additional specialized training
- Identify the vulnerable people in your faith community; disabled, elderly, young, those living alone or in isolated areas, those lacking transportation/mobility (particularly in disasters involving evacuation), other special needs.
- Sponsor training for families in disaster preparation and planning.
- Identify the types of disasters predictable for your area.
- Prepare your people theologically to deal with disaster with special emphasis on intentional and human-caused disasters.

For additional and expanded recommendations, an excellent resource is Guide to Disaster Ministry in Your Congregation from the Prepare to Care Series of Church World Service Emergency Response Program (www.cwserp.org)

Rev. Robert H. Barnes

Grace Unlimited, July 2005